It's Not the Bad Bowl... It's What You Do Next

Every bowler plays bad bowls.

The difference between players often isn't how many mistakes they make, it's how they respond to them.

You've just dropped one short. What happens next?

Too often we immediately react. "I need more weight."

So, we force the next bowl, and it sails two meters through the head.

Or we miss our line wide, consciously try to pull the next one inside...and suddenly we're narrow.

The mistake isn't necessarily the first bowl. The mistake is allowing the first bowl to control the second.

A simple approach is to encourage players to:

1. Acknowledge it.

Don't pretend the bowl wasn't poor.

2. Learn from it.

Was it line? Weight? Delivery? Conditions? Identify the information without over analyzing.

3. Reset.

Go back to your normal pre-shot routine and play the next bowl as a new shot, not an emotional correction of the

Try this in practice

Play four bowls to the jack, but score your second bowl after every miss.

If your first bowl finishes outside your target area, your challenge is to completely reset and get the next bowl ins

You'll quickly discover that recovery is a skill and like every other skill, it can be practiced.

Competition bowls isn't about becoming a player who never misses.

It's about becoming a player who doesn't let one miss become two.
