BOWLS LAW: The skipper of Team A plays his shot which disturbs the head. The Skipper of Team B asks his third "who now has shot?" The third holds his bowling aid over the two bowls in question using it to gauge the distance and declares one the shot. The skipper of Team A claims that as the opposition third measured the shot they now forfeit the right to play any more bowls in that end. Is he correct?

No. Under Definition C.21 measuring can only be done with equipment intended for that purpose. The Third of Team B was only getting an indication of shot the same as those players using the 'crossed finger' thing.
