BOB STEPHENSON

GLEN ALCHIN

MEMBER PROFILE – PATRON DR ROB MELLOR

I was born and grew up in Penshurst in the heart of the St George area of Sydney and therefore a lifetime Dragons supporter. I was at the Sydney Cricket Ground for 10 of their grand final wins 1956-66.

I played Junior A-grade tennis and played against Dick Crealy and Ray Ruffles, future Davis Cup players. I was also a handy athlete, mainly a sprinter, but never reached the heights of my cousin Fleur, who passed the baton to Betty Cuthbert to win the gold medal in the Women's Relay at the 1956 Olympics. I also played cricket and football to no great level.

I studied at Sydney University, gaining honours in mathematics, statistics and economics.

After graduating, I moved to Canberra to work for the Bureau of Statistics, designing and analysing sample surveys. For example, I worked on the Work Force Survey, which required a sample of about 60,000 people aged 15+ from the population (then) of about 13 million. This entailed dividing the country up into cities, towns and regional areas, and selecting a random but representative sample from each area. Based on the responses from the sample of people selected, a mathematical process had to be devised to estimate the relevant work force characteristics of the Australian population as a whole, and to produce margins of error associated with such estimates.

I also worked on sample surveys of businesses of various kinds, manufacturing, retail etc, for which again the objective was to produce a representative sample of all relevant businesses in such a way that the required data (stocks, capital expenditure, sales, employment etc) could be derived. These calculations involved complex mathematical formulae, which were initially (1965) carried out on a large (but simple) Mechanical Tabulation Machine, but steadily over the years these calculations were transferred to the newly acquired large scale computers. Whilst in Canberra I played competition squash and social tennis.

The Commonwealth Government had a scholarship scheme for Commonwealth public servants to go overseas to study recent developments in areas of interest to the public service. I was one of the first to apply for a scholarship to do a Doctorate and was successful in obtaining a scholarship to Harvard University, where I spent a very rewarding three and a half years, including developing methods of measuring the accuracy of sample surveys for my Doctorate, plus other course programs.

Harvard boasted a wide range of distinguished academics including Nobel Prize winners and advisors to Presidents (Kissinger, Galbraith, Moynihan), who gave public lectures. There were also lots of visiting dignitaries such as the Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban (an exceptional orator) who carefully explained why the land of Israel was so important to the Jewish people.

On returning to Australia, I resumed working at the Bureau of Statistics in more senior management positions. A highlight was visiting Port Moresby twice in 1975-76 to plan and design a sample of the population of the more significant areas of New Guinea, to collect a range of employment, economic and social characteristics of the population. In the late 1980's the University of Western Sydney established a campus at Campbelltown, and I joined as Head of Mathematics and Computing. Later around 2000, the University combined academic units across the six campuses, and I worked hard to ensure all mathematics and statistics staff across all campuses were included in the one School and I was appointed founding Head and continued in that role until my retirement in 2006. It was very satisfying to join UWS in its early days, and be able to influence its growth and direction, and help establish tertiary education courses in South-West and Western Sydney.

During my time at UWS, I was also involved in collaborative research with some colleagues, applying statistical methods to a range of areas of business and management.

For example, in a study of new product development, we were able to identify the key characteristics of a firm which made them successful in developing new products. We applied a statistical method called Factor Analysis. This identifies why certain firms are more successful in developing new products.

My research enabled me to publish over sixty papers in international journals, and attend a variety of overseas conferences, including Singapore, Shanghai, Warsaw, Berlin and Istanbul. I was also granted two study leaves as Visiting Professor at University of Warwick (UK, 1990) and Free University of Brussels (1994).

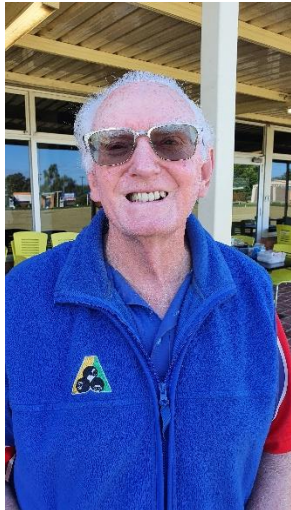

I have been a member of the Statistical Society of Australia for over sixty years, and held executive positions in the NSW and ACT Branches, as well as the Central Council.

I came to Camden in 1986 to join the University of Western Sydney and played competition tennis at South Camden until my knees gave out. A little later I joined Camden Bowling Club but played bowls in a fairly limited way until I retired in 2006. I then joined the Match Committee, and was Chair for 9 years, and Assistant Bowls Organiser for 5 years. I was Vice-President for 5 years and President 3 years. Camden Men's Bowling Club conferred on me what I consider my greatest honour, by being made a Life Member of this great club in 2019, and then Patron in 2021. My honours in bowls are limited to winner of the Minor Pairs and Veteran Pairs, and some keyrings and biros, including as Skip in the Club Fours, and Zone Reserve Pairs. I have always enjoyed Pennants and have played most years (all grades 4-7) and won four pennant badges.

In retirement I was fortunate to be able to travel widely, in particular to the UK, France, Germany, Spain, Switzerland, Japan, Canada, US, New Zealand, Russia and the Baltic States, and my favourite, Italy (delicious food and wine!).

I look forward to many more years of playing bowls and enjoying the company of members at Camden Bowling Club.

In the late 1800s, a baboon named Jack was employed as a signalman by the Uitenhage railway in South Africa. Jack was the companion of James Wide, a railway worker who had lost both legs in an accident. Wide trained Jack to operate the railway signals with his guidance, and the baboon quickly became exceptionally proficient. Jack's work was so reliable that he was officially hired by the railway, receiving rations as payment. Over the course of his nine years of service, Jack never made a mistake, remaining a dedicated worker until his passing in 1890. His story is widely remembered as a remarkable example of animal intelligence and collaboration with humans.

Bison are the only animal that turn into a snowstorm rather than away from it because they instinctively know that walking into the storm will get them out of the weather quicker. There may be a life lesson for humans in this. It also makes for some epic pictures.

Carter, along with others, personally lowered himself into the reactor to take it apart by hand, exposing himself to radiation levels a thousand times higher than what was considered safe.

RON HOWARD'S VW

Ron Howard with his 1970 Volkswagen Bug. Howard purchased the car new in 1970 at age 16, and it was his first car. He drove the VW until 1976ish, when he got rid of it. A few years ago, Howard's brother-in-law found it in Redding, California, where Howard has a lot of relatives.

The person who had it was using it to deliver eggs, and it still had Ron Howard's college sticker on it. Howard's brother-in-law repurchased it, replaced the engine, and shipped it back to Howard. Today, Howard drives it regularly and says it is the only car he has ever loved. He credits his father for giving him common sense as a teenager with money and buying a Volkswagen instead of a Corvette.

Driving in Houston, Texas is not for the faint of heart!

Hisashimichi interchange situated in Hachioji, near Tokyo, Japan 🇯🇵

On June 4, 1950, Vittie Cothron etched his name into stock car racing lore with an incredible display of ingenuity and determination. Driving his 1936 Ford Coupe in a competitive race, Vittie encountered a serious problem on the final lap: the accelerator linkage fell off, leaving his car unable to maintain speed. For most drivers, this would have ended their race. But not for Vittie.

Quick on his feet and even quicker in his thinking, Vittie came up with a daring solution. He reached through the windshield with his right hand to manually hold the carburettor open, using his left hand to steer the car. With remarkable skill and composure, he navigated the track, maintaining enough speed to secure a third-place finish. It wasn't just a mechanical improvisation; it was a testament to his resilience and refusal to give up, even under the most challenging circumstances.

Vittie's resourcefulness turned what could have been a disheartening setback into a story of grit and creativity. His unconventional approach became a vivid example of the problem-solving spirit that defines racing and the people who love it. It wasn't just about the finish line—it was about finding a way to keep going, no matter what obstacles stood in the way. This unforgettable moment reminds us that success often comes down to our ability to adapt when things don't go as planned. "When the tools you rely on fail, let determination and ingenuity be the fuel that carries you forward."

2 MILLION KLM COROLLA

A man in New Zealand has created a record of sorts. The car he bought in 1993 - a Toyota Corolla - has clocked more than two million kilometres. And, surprisingly, the car is still running efficiently. According to New Zealand Herald, 72-year-old Graeme Hebley noticed the milestone mark in March and believes it will run "forever". Mr Hebley has been working as a newspaper delivery contractor since the 1960s, the Herald report further said. He purchased the car in the year 2000 when it had only 80,000 kilometres on the odometer. Mr Hebley drives from Wellington to New Plymouth and back six days a week. This means the car runs 5,000 kilometres every week, which requires him to get it serviced every fortnight.

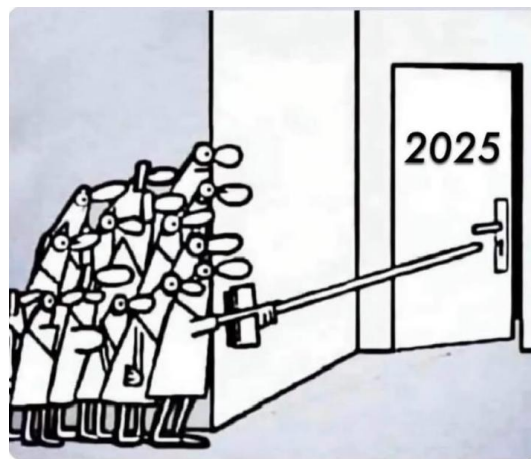

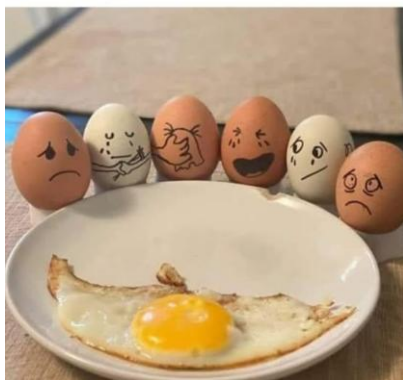

The Corolla, which still has the original engine and transmission, is serviced at Guthrie's Auto Care in Whanganui every two weeks for the last 22 years, according to New Zealand Herald. "I broke down one morning in one of my vans. I rang John Sherman from Guthrie's and he came out and helped me. I have been getting all of my servicing done here since," Mr Hebley was quoted as saying by the Herald.

"It was used to deliver chippies in Tokyo before I got it," he further said.

The only major changes in the car's two-decade-long journey are cambelt - which has been replaced 20 times - and wheel bearings. Besides these parts, the car is original, the outlet further said.

FUNNIES

He died last fry day. Thank God he wasn't beaten. Don't worry, he went over easy. He's now on the sunny side. He's definitely in a better plate.

The boat used as the S.S. Minnow in Gilligan's Island was a 1964 Wheeler with a cruising speed of 12 knots, which means they couldn't have traveled more than 41.5 miles. Honestly I'm starting to doubt if the show was even real.
